Jarus

JarusHub is organizing Mock Test to prepare you.

JARUSHUB DANGOTE MOCK TEST

JarusHub is a Nigerian startup with focus on careers and employability skills improvement.

We have prepared more than 150 people for interviews of top companies, including NNPC, Oando, KPMG, NLNG, PwC and Afrinvest and a good number of our enrollees were successful.

We are conducting a Mock Test for the forthcoming Dangote Test.

A mock test is a just a test that prepares you for the real test. We gather experts together in the disciplines to use the information given to you to guess questions and you will sit down and write the test. We will then give you feedback and correct you on what you need to work on.

There will also be mock group discussions. We have done this for many companies in the past and have had sessions in Lagos, Abuja and Port Harcourt.

Most of our trainers are First Class graduates of top disciplines who are test experts.

Our fee is N3000 per participant. And this is a subsidised fee as such services go for as much as $300 (60k) in other countries.

Date for this Mock Test will be communicated when we firm up things with our experts.

Venue is JarusHub office, 59 Queen Street, Alagomeji, Yaba, Lagos

Dangote Group has no specific time when it comes to recruitment. The recruitments process before mine took just 3months (from submission of CV to the resumption date). Mine took 7months. I remember waiting for 2months after aptitude test before interview and another 2months after interview before resumption. So, they are not too specific when it comes to timing. The first section of the test is purely gmat(general engineering) while the other section are questions on ur field. The group discussions and the interview will depend on the panel you fall in...They dont normally ask the same questions. Just be prepared to apply ur listening skills as you maybe interviewed by Indians.

executive trainee I think especially if you're a B.Sc holder. And the post is being spread to various disciplines, but it's kind of restricted to engineering alone I think. Management training is more for post graduate engineers, meaning those who have M.sc , i might be wrong though, but I think thaths what I inferred from what I read online.

And I got the invite.

My Application status still reads under review too.

Really confused as dre is no syllabus for IT.

Who else applied for IT and got d invite?

Most people that applied and got an invite also have their application under review. The most important thing is we got an invite. But what to read now is the problem and the mail they sent isn't one we ca reply.

Jarus

JarusHub is organizing Mock Test to prepare you.

JARUSHUB DANGOTE MOCK TEST

JarusHub is a Nigerian startup with focus on careers and employability skills improvement.

We have prepared more than 150 people for interviews of top companies, including NNPC, Oando, KPMG, NLNG, PwC and Afrinvest and a good number of our enrollees were successful.

We are conducting a Mock Test for the forthcoming Dangote Test.

A mock test is a just a test that prepares you for the real test. We gather experts together in the disciplines to use the information given to you to guess questions and you will sit down and write the test. We will then give you feedback and correct you on what you need to work on.

There will also be mock group discussions. We have done this for many companies in the past and have had sessions in Lagos, Abuja and Port Harcourt.

Most of our trainers are First Class graduates of top disciplines who are test experts.

Our fee is N3000 per participant. And this is a subsidised fee as such services go for as much as $300 (60k) in other countries.

Date for this Mock Test will be communicated when we firm up things with our experts.

Venue is JarusHub office, 59 Queen Street, Alagomeji, Yaba, Lagos

Dangote Group has no specific time when it comes to recruitment. The recruitments process before mine took just 3months (from submission of CV to the resumption date). Mine took 7months. I remember waiting for 2months after aptitude test before interview and another 2months after interview before resumption. So, they are not too specific when it comes to timing. The first section of the test is purely gmat(general engineering) while the other section are questions on ur field. The group discussions and the interview will depend on the panel you fall in...They dont normally ask the same questions. Just be prepared to apply ur listening skills as you maybe interviewed by Indians.

guy no b dangote academy dey conduct dz exam.Haruna HASSAN n korede no get hand for dz o.its strictly dangote group.

If I also may ask a question, what's your discipline? I will advise you to study the syllabus as sent to your mail. The Aug applicants that wrote test last year were also sent syllabus to study....And also, pray for favour because many peeps complained about how hard the questions were but they later got called for interview and later stages.

If you don't mind, could you answer the prev question, did u apply in Aug or Nov. The reason the other guy asked was probably because Nov applicants, which I'm also among, whose status read awaiting interview are still expecting feedback.

Wish you the best.

Nothing much about the aptitude test, just make sure that you try to get or download relevant materials on the topics that was sent to you on your mail for the test invitation. And also pray for God's favour

Tinkel

I applied for executive trainee (under electrical engineer) at dangote oil refinery company limited last year august(batch A). I went through all the five stages of the recruitment process ranging from aptitude test, group discussion, panel interview, psychometric test and medical test and by the grace of God I was able to scale through all this stages. Finally I was called to resume for the job this year, presently we are undergoing training in oil refinery operations outside the country.

My advice is that we don't need to get too anxious about this job, what I feel is the Success tips for the recruitment process of dangote oil refinery company are:

1. Group discussion, topics will range from Infrastructural development to health sector, oil Prices etc) during this interview, candidates must be calm, undominering, attentive, giving intelligent contribution).
2. Panel interview(ie one on one interview), if you are invited for this 3rd stage, make sure that you have a clear understanding of the basic concept of your discipline, the secret here is that your cv will play an important role here and it will determine the kind of questions that they will ask you, so make sure you are able to convinced your panelist of your past job experience relevant to your discipline, because most questions asked are very technical and it is discipline based. Be calm and also be confident of what ever you are saying.
3. Psychometric test, at this stage you will be given seven different questions papers to answer for a time duration of two hours, this test is know your personality and behavior under working conditions.
4. Medical test

No one is an HR here or can know academic qualifications of all past test invitees, but I don't want to see your post unanswered. As far as the refinery executive advert was concerned, the advert stated B.Sc., MSc. This is not anyway casting doubt on your application, your CV may be appealing to them
If it was GETS, I know they usually invite HND.

Don't get it twisted sis, what you read here was about Dangote Refinery recruitment which was a different recruitment drive on its own. GETS doesn't come with syllabus attachment like Dangote refinery recruitment.

To your question, read GMAT and other engineering/course related areas.

Bros, your discipline is applicable in both companies. What might bring the confusion is which company offers better salary, growth prospect, job security etc.

Don't neglect Dangote refinery test invite (if you have perhaps got any) because someone is promising chevron offer. Always spread your tentacles in job search, when multiple offers come, you may now analyze the best and choose the one that suits you best.

I applied for executive trainee (under electrical engineer) at dangote oil refinery company limited last year august(batch A). I went through all the five stages of the recruitment process ranging from aptitude test, group discussion, panel interview, psychometric test and medical test and by the grace of God I was able to scale through all this stages. Finally I was called to resume for the job this year, presently we are undergoing training in oil refinery operations outside the country.

My advice is that we don't need to get too anxious about this job, what I feel is the Success tips for the recruitment process of dangote oil refinery company are:

1. Group discussion, topics will range from Infrastructural development to health sector, oil Prices etc) during this interview, candidates must be calm, undominering, attentive, giving intelligent contribution).

In this just concluded recruitment, we had people in their PHD who started out with us .. but note;

since you applied for a GT role most certainly you will be required to come with your first degree cert. Either during your interview or final documentation after a successful medicals(A friend in your shoes believed that was the reason he never made it through the interview, I can't tell though)

Also note that starting from your test to your interview, every thing you will do will be based on the department you applied for. And if you are sure of your self, you can give it a trial. They must have shortlisted you for a reason.

about 150k for fresh graduates.

The pay depends on a lot of Factors, but basically on where your training is to take place(Nigeria/abroad)

The amount up there may be applicable to other Dangote group or other entry level positions but certainly not this.

Just to add, when assumptions are made it is best to make it known. That way people won't be misguided

When i had mine, we were told more people will be called, and it will be in batches..... I believe people will be called based on need, because alot of people are still waiting at different stages of the recruitment....

I also waited months before i got called, and some of my colleagues waited for almost a year....

Tinkel:

I applied for executive trainee (under electrical engineer) at dangote oil refinery company limited last year august(batch A). I went through all the five stages of the recruitment process ranging from aptitude test, group discussion, panel interview, psychometric test and medical test and by the grace of God I was able to scale through all this stages. Finally I was called to resume for the job this year, presently we are undergoing training in oil refinery operations outside the country.

My advice is that we don't need to get too anxious about this job, what I feel is the Success tips for the recruitment process of dangote oil refinery company are:

1. Group discussion, topics will range from Infrastructural development to health sector, oil Prices etc) during this interview, candidates must be calm, undominering, attentive, giving intelligent contribution).
2. Panel interview(ie one on one interview), if you are invited for this 3rd stage, make sure that you have a clear understanding of the basic concept of your discipline, the secret here is that your cv will play an important role here and it will determine the kind of questions that they will ask you, so make sure you are able to convinced your panelist of your past job experience relevant to your discipline, because most questions asked are very technical and it is discipline based. Be calm and also be confident of what ever you are saying.
3. Psychometric test, at this stage you will be given seven different questions papers to answer for a time duration of two hours, this test is know your personality and behavior under working conditions.
4. Medical test

Pls do u know of any candidate with HND who got offer for graduate engineering trainee, or is it strictly for B.tech nd B.eng?

Tanx

No HND candidate has done interview let alone receiving offer. Those successful ones from GD were told that their Application is under processing and that is why their status is showing awaiting Interview. So we are still very much hoping they contact us soonest. Though many of us have received offer from other companies. No time to wait. Dangote attended to Bsc 2.1. That's the reason we haven't been contacted. Though we will be contacted soonest.

HND holder and Bsc 2.2 are yet to be called for interview even after performing very well in the G.D as Dangote rightly noted by email. So please if you are in this category just look for another thing to be doing until dangote remember these categories of candidates. You can't imagine that dangote are focusing on Bsc 2.1 for immediate employment and training abroad, then I wonder why they invited them for test and even G.D.

Dangote don start again oooo. We Hnd/Bsc2.2 that did well in the GD hasn't been contacted since June 2, 2018. Them don dey invite Hnd again. What about the previous ones that were qualified? Their status still shows awaiting interview. God help us all. Amen.

Flexy99

I came across a write up. They said Dangote needs 2000 Technicians in the first train fertilizer plant by this year. I think their is so much hope for Hnd. So get ready for those awaiting interview. But my worry is that those eyeing Dangote job might have been occupied with other companies.

Dedonrukky

The first train of the fertilizer plant has been completed. Now awaiting commissioning. They are now recruiting massively.

Flexy99

I called a friend we both did interview at Dangote to check his profile status and he said his own changed from awaiting interview to under review. But as am updating the house now, my status still shows awaiting interview. I think there's Hope for those candidates who hasn't done interview and their status shows awaiting interview. Please what is the salary range for GT-for those whose training takes place in Nigeria & Abroad?

Znioshine:

The pay depends on a lot of factors, but basically on where your training is to take place (Nigeria/abroad)

The amount up there may be applicable to other Dangote group or other entry level positions but certainly not this.

Just to add, when assumptions are made it is best to make it known. That way people won't be misguided

Guys if you're not a chemical engineering graduate and you got an invite to the Dangote refinery test. Don't bother going. The test is 120 minutes as stated in the mail. Two sections - chemical engineering section and general aptitude questions consisting of numeric 80% and verbal 20%. Each section is 60 minutes. Just prepare wide

Please what site can one read from for this test o?

I am just laughing. Somebody listed some topics ranging from heat transfer, mass transfer, chemical thermodynamic, chemical plant economics. Everything was in the test. It was a real test of knowledge. For the general aptitude test mehn read anything as there data interpretation, logical reasoning questions, combination, GRE, cat questions, GMAT. It was a test of speed and knowledge. Just try your best. To tell you what exactly to read. I feel like telling you to read everything below is a concise summary from a nairaland user that underwent the recruitment process and today is a staff with Dangote Group:

I applied for executive trainee (under electrical engineer) at Dangote Oil Refinery Company Limited last year August (batch A). I went through all the five stages of the recruitment process ranging from aptitude test, group discussion, panel interview, psychometric test and medical test and by the grace of God I was able to scale through all these stages. Finally I was called to resume for the job this year, presently we are undergoing training in oil refinery operations outside the country.

My advice is that we don't need to get too anxious about this job, what I feel is the success tips for the recruitment process of Dangote Oil Refinery Company are:

1. Group discussion, topics will range from Infrastructural development to health sector, oil prices etc) during this interview, candidates must be calm, undomineering, attentive, giving intelligent contribution).
2. Panel interview (e.g. one on one interview), if you are invited for this 3rd stage, make sure that you have a clear understanding of the basic concept of your discipline, the secret here is that your CV will play an important role here and it will determine the kind of questions that they will ask you, so make sure you are able to convince your panelist of your past job experience relevant to your discipline, because most questions asked are very technical and it is discipline based. Be calm and also be confident of what ever you are saying.
3. Psychometric test, at this stage you will be given seven different question papers to answer for a time duration of two hours, this test is to know your personality and behavior under working conditions.
4. Medical test

Here's a general direction for those coming to the venue:

Wherever you are coming from, find your way to Computer Village under bridge at IKEJA, ask for Keke Maruwa going towards Guinness. Drop at Dangote 2nd gate. It's hard to miss. The Keke charges just #50. Or you can use Lara.ng or Google maps.

Here's the final admonishment for those sitting for the test in May 2019 Only :

Guys if you're not a chemical engineering graduate and you got an invite to the Dangote Refinery test. Don't bother going. The test is 120 minutes as stated in the mail. Two sections - chemical engineering section and general aptitude questions consisting of numeric 80% and verbal 20%. Each section is 60 minutes. Just prepare wide

Makanjuola89

The test is 2 hours (120 mins) as stated in the mail. 1 hour for chemical engineering questions in which you will answer any 100 questions out of 120. Another 1 hour for aptitude test to answer 100 questions comprising of numerical and verbal.

Just go there with a pure mind and don't make it a do or die affair.

As for those who are not chemical engineering graduates and got the invite, the HR guy stated it clearly that it's strictly for chemical engineers. He mentioned a guy who came all the way from Uyo only to find out that it's only chemical engineers that were called but he got the invite. Though he allowed the guy to write the test because of his far distance but told him that the management will decide on his case. My advice is if you are not a chemical engineering graduate don't even bother going cos I swear you won't be able to answer those chemical questions, you will just be playing games.

For those who are still serving and got invite pls go O. You will be required to show your NYSC ID card. A guy who is still serving came for the test and was allowed to write when he showed proof.

For the over Sabi and over religious people, please check your mail very well O you are asked to go with your birth certificate not "baptisms" certificate. A guy presented "baptism" certificate today though the lady allowed him but warned him against next time. Thank God he didn't meet a sadist.

I wish you all best of luck.

I want to repeat what I have said before in this trend that you should not waste your time, money and energy if you're not a chemical engineer. If you think you have prepared well for the chemical engineering questions and your course is not chemical engineering, please feel free to try your luck. There are two sections. The first is the chemical engineering section which contains 120 multiple choice questions for 60 minutes, the second section is the general aptitude section which contains 100 multiple choice questions for 60 minutes. The general aptitude test is the toughest. I believe the questions are from Indian common admission test with area of concentration on logical reasoning, verbal reasoning and data interpretation. Trust me they are tough without preparation. They are simple with preparation. Just try your best and Good luck.

The advert stated only chemical engineers. The invigilator mentioned it. So don't waste your energy on this recruitment.

this test isn't about answering everything. a wrong chemical engineering question is -1. a right one is +2. for the quantitative reasoning, wrong takes -0.5 while right one is +1. so you gotta be smart and veryyy fast

And the possibility of finishing these questions in 2 hours is negligible. For me, the easiest part was even the aptitude section. those chemical engineering questions came from hell lol.

then the idea of writing a chemical engineering test for a non chemical engineering candidate is somewhat crazy. well, unless you can withstand it. alot of guys in my hall that were non chemical engineering candidates were literally swearing under their breath. one even went to the extent of submitting the answer booklet unanswered to begin on the aptitude part.

So even if you're invited but the mail states its for another discipline, I'll advise you stay back if you'll borrow money to come for the test.

for those yet to write, make indiabix.com your partner. especially the chemical engineering guys, focus on thermodynamics, heat and mass transfer, fluid mechanics, process control and instrumentation. that's where the bulk of questions came from. if its possible, finish the practice questions on indiabix.com for these courses.

p.s : this is coming from my own experience today after the test. anyone can come to counter this either due to the difference in their own experience or whatever makes them to. But goodluck to everyone!

below is a concise summary from a nairaland user that underwent the recruitment process and today is a staff with dangote group:

I applied for executive trainee (under electrical engineer) at dangote oil refinery company limited last year august(batch A). I went through all the five stages of the recruitment process ranging from aptitude test, group discussion, panel interview, psychometric test and medical test and by the grace of God I was able to scale through all these stages. Finally I was called to resume for the job this year, presently we are undergoing training in oil refinery operations outside the country.

My advice is that we don't need to get too anxious about this job, what I feel is the Success tips for the recruitment process of dangote oil refinery company are:

1. Group discussion, topics will range from Infrastructural development to health sector, oil Prices etc during this interview, candidates must be calm, undominating, attentive, giving intelligent contribution.

2. Panel interview(ie one on one interview), if you are invited for this 3rd stage, make sure that you have a clear understanding of the basic concept of your discipline, the secret here is that your cv will play an important role here and it will determine the kind of questions that they will ask you, so make sure you are able to convince your panelist of your past job experience relevant to your discipline, because most questions asked are very technical and it is discipline based. Be calm and also be confident of what ever you are saying.

3. Psychometric test, at this stage you will be given seven different question papers to answer for a time duration of two hours, this test is to know your personality and behavior under working conditions.

4. Medical test

Here's a general direction for those coming to the venue:

wherever you are coming from, find your way to computer village under bridge at IKEJA, ask for keke maruwa going towards Guinness. drop at Dangote 2nd gate. it's hard to miss. the keke charges just #50. or you can use Lara.ng or Google maps

Here's the final admonishment for those sitting for the test in May 2019 Only :

Guys if you're not a chemical engineering graduate and you got an invite to the dangote refinery test. Don't bother going. The test is 120 minutes as stated in the mail. Two sections - chemical engineering section and general aptitude questions consisting of numeric 80% and verbal 20%. Each section is 60 minutes. Just prepare wide

Naa, I don't think the interviews are in batches. I have moved on. 😊

efetoski

The HR told us that day that they are going to invite those in Lagos first before others out of Lagos. This is because they wouldn't want people to waste time and money travelling back when the psychometric stage is like the next day immediately after the interview. This is to say the interview is in batches. However, if you know any outside Lagos who has been invited you can tell us

It was stated at the end of the GD that non Lagos residents would be scheduled at a time most convenient for them. The interview mail dropped on Friday night. You would not expect someone to travel from Kano within such a short notice. Even candidates within Lagos would still be called because my friend did so well at the GD but is yet to be invited. Keep calm guys.

you cant really predict where the questions will come from. The interviewer will ask you questions based on what catches his eye on your CV and also what you say, you have to know a lot about whatever you write on your CV (SO DON'T PUT LIES THERE). Its an interactive interview, you can mention the area you are really good at and they might just throw you questions from that. One has to just calm down and carefully listen to what the interviewer says (you might not hear them sometimes so pay attention).

All the best.

I participated in the GD organize 5th of this month. Fortunately, I was invited last wk Wednesday(10th) for the interview. Recently, I got an invite from the group stating that I should come for the psychometric/IQ test coming Tuesday (16th).
Hope it's clear now, meanwhile, I base in Lagos.

Please i want to find out something, was ur GD actually 5th or you requested for a reschedule to 5th

Psychometric test is really long and tasking and it includes multiple papers(I think up to 10 if I remember properly). Time frame is 2.5 hours

Uricas:

For those who had their interview last week, mail is being sent for the next stage- IQ and Psychometric test.
Anybody with idea of the test?

You can collect your statement of account for the last 3 months from your bank. That will suffice.
